ABSTRACT

A review and analysis was conducted of state programs in bilingual education for the purpose of describing authorizing legislation, identifying program goals, objectives and mandated or prohibited approaches or practices; defining program requirements for staff qualifications, training activities, materials development and technology and study/teacher ratios. The legislative review necessary to accomplish these tasks prompted the thought that it would be helpful to the bilingual education community, and those administratively involved with this community, if all the major provisions of existing state legislation supporting bilingual instruction in the Nation were contained in one volume. This supporting volume of the final report for the Study of State Programs in Bilingual Education is a result of this. For each of the 50 states plus American Samoa, Guam, Puerto Rico, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Virgin Islands, it contains data and information relating to: (1) whether or not bilingual instruction is permitted, mandated or prohibited; (2) the identity of the state's bilingual instruction authority; (3) the prime goal of the state's bilingual education program; (4) the amount of state funds appropriated for support of bilingual education during the 1975-1976 school year; and (5) the major governing conditions imposed by the state's legislative authority for the implementation of bilingual instruction. INTRODUCTION

Development Associates, Inc., conducted a review and analysis of state programs in bilingual education for the purpose of describing authorizing legislation, identifying program goals, objectives and mandated or prohibited approaches or practices; defining program requirements for staff qualifications, training activities, materials development and technology and study/teacher ratios. The legislative review necessary to accomplish these tasks prompted the thought that it would be helpful to the bilingual education community, and those administratively involved with this community if all the major provisions of existing state legislation supporting bilingual instruction in the Nation were contained in one volume. This supporting volume of the final report for the Study of State Programs in Bilingual Education is a result of this. It contains for each of the 50 states plus American Samoa, Guam, Puerto Rico, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Virgin Islands data and information relating to:

- Whether or not bilingual instruction is permitted, mandated or prohibited;
- The identity of the state's bilingual instruction authority;
- The prime goal of the state's bilingual education program;
- The amount of state funds appropriated for support of bilingual education during the 1975-1976 school year; and
- The major governing conditions imposed by the state's legislative authority for the implementation of bilingual instruction.

To define the status of bilingual instruction as permitted, mandated or prohibited in states silent on the subject of bilingual instruction in their schools, the study staff, after due consideration of the study's intent and faced with the fact that the silent states tacitly permit bilingual instruction in their schools, opted for recording these states as "permitting" bilingual instruction.

In undertaking this work the study staff found it necessary to attribute specific interpretations to the meaning of certain words used in the legislative texts reviewed. It was found that without making such interpretations the work could not be completed. We recognize that other individuals may attach other interpretations to the words in legislative texts and that these interpretations might be in conflict with those contained herein; in such cases this volume at least serves as a useful beginning.

The information in this volume is current as of December 1976. Since mid-1975, seven states have changed their posture with regard to bilingual education -- California, Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Utah, and Wisconsin. Other states, e.g., Missouri, have tried to change but the proposed legislation failed to pass.

The data are presented in two parts: Part I : Status and Summary of the Provisions Contained in State Bilingual Instruction/Education Legislation (in the form of four tables) and Part II : Individual Inventory of Bilingual Provisions in Current State Legislation Governing Education by State.

Jurisdiction:	Instruction in a Second Language:	Governing Conditions and/or Remarks
Puerto Rico	PERMITTED	- The Commonwealth of Puerto Rico has not adopted specific legislation outlining a bilingual education program. Its Constitution provides for the use of English or Spanish, interchangeably, as official languages. As of the year 1952, Spanish has been the language of instruction in Puerto Rican schools with English being taught as a second language and as a special subject in language arts at all grade levels. No other foreign language instruction is offered in Puerto Rican public schools through the 12th grade. This special English language arts program is titled, "The English Program" and is defined by Puerto Rico as bilingual education
Bilingual Education Authority:
Title I, Section 51, General Education Code, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico
Bilingual Education Goal:		Note 1: The Puerto Rican school systems' bilingual education program, the "English Language Program," has as a goal the teaching of English as a second language
The English Program: English Arts Proficiency
The ESEA Title VII Program: Transition. English to Spanish (See Note 1)		The Puerto Rican school systems' ESEA Title VII Bilingual Education Program addresses the goal of transitioning students, coming to Puerto Rico from the U. S. mainland, into the Spanish language, the islands' history
Local Jurisdiction Funds Appropriated in Support of Bilingual Education: (1975-1976 School Year)		Note 2: The Puerto Rican legislature, from the total spectrum of all funds available to it for appropriations, allocated over 22 million dollars in support of the school systems' "English Language Program."
